ART for GOD

Mary Godby has been an artist and an Episcopalian all her life. But the two didn't come together until about 10 years ago.

That was when she and a friend, both members of the congregation of St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Upland, decided to learn tie-dying and batik. The colorful banners they made for the church parish hall were the start of a volunteer career for Godby.

The Alta Loma resident, who said she has been an artist "since I was 5," now spends much of her time designing and making items used in worship. From the priest's clothing to the wooden benches in the chapel, Godby has had a hand in much of the St. Mark's design.

When she is not designing for the church, she is teaching art to the St. Mark's students part-time.

With a background in art history, Godby stayed true to her church's history when creating her designs. She got many of her ideas for the church from Upland's first St. Mark's church on 18th Street, now the Chaffey Communities Cultural Center.

There, paintings by Claremont artist Henry McFee remain on the walls. Photographing them, Godby was able to use many of his symbols in her own work.

The most predominant one is McFee's crown, a symbol of Christ used during the season of Epiphany, she said.

Godby, who earned her bachelor's degree in art history, has long been aware of religion's impact on art. But through her involvement with St. Mark's she learned more about the intertwining of the two. She has learned more about the meaning of church symbols.

"I've been an Episcopalian all my life, but this has been very meaningful," she said. Godby returned to school, the Claremont School of Theology, to learn more about the relationship of religion and art and get her master's degree.

Since then she has established the Godby Group, a business in worship art for churches across the country in which she does the design and works with people who sew, woodworkers and other artists to carry them out.

Her work for St. Mark's and for last September's National General Convention of Episcopal Churches has been volunteer. With her teaching, she said, she is left little time for the business.

Working on the convention alone was like having a part-time job, she said. As visual coordinator for the event which drew 10,000 Episcopalians, she designed and made a large alter cloth.

She also traveled throughout the Los Angeles diocese collecting pieces from different churches that would fit in with the overall design of the convention.

Visual effects and symbols are very important to Episcopalian services, she explained.

For example, the religion has different colors for the vestments, alter clothes, banners and other paraphernalia used in each religious season. For Christmas, she has designed materials using red and white, especially with the white rose — a symbol of Virgin Mary.

For the current season, which runs through the summer, the color is green and symbols of nature like trees and flowers are dominant, she said. □

Bev Erickson plans to spend most of her free time learning more about music so she can teach it to children. She says she also hopes to learn something new herself.

Teacher retiring so she can start another career

By Suzanne Sproul

Bev Erickson is retiring so she can start another career.

The Cabrillo School teacher in Upland has devoted 26 years of her life to education, 24 of those years in California schools.

During those years she tried to introduce a little music into her students' lives.

She's been right in the middle of many of the student productions and assemblies during the years.

After she bids goodbye to her teaching days June 20 she hopes to more seriously study music, a second love of her life, Erickson said.

"I'm retiring so I can learn more about music," she said with a smile.

"I play in two or three groups now. I play the hammered dulcimer, a folk instrument popular in the Appalachias. I love music."

One of the groups Erickson is a member of is the "Lilies of the West." The group has performed at the Los Angeles and Orange County fairs.

But although music is a favorite of hers she has equally loved teaching.

"I have absolutely loved teaching. I would never quit, but I need time for myself now," she said.

Erickson said she hopes to take advantage of the Upland School District's early retirement program. If a teacher retires early, she then can teach 30 days per year.

Erickson hopes to teach music. While she was discussing her career recently, the veteran teacher was busily planning a major student musical production, "It's Music."

New president to delay making major changes

By Marianne Aiken

Chaffey College's new president said he is going to wait awhile before making any major changes when he takes the helm July 1.

Jerry Young, 48, who is leaving the president's position at Centralia College in Centralia, Wash., to come to the Alta Loma campus, received unanimous approval from the Chaffey College governing board Thursday night on a 3-year contract. The district also will pay for Young's moving and relocation expenses.

When asked if he would be making any changes in the college's management team, Young said he would recommend to the board that no changes be made initially.

"That's based on not being employed yet," he added.

Young said he was asked about his impression of the college's organizational structure during the interview process.

"I'm not coming in with any assumptions about what needs to be done here," he said. "I think I need to get here and look at the situation. I personally don't have any changes planned."

Young said he planned to start off by sending questionnaires to the staff, to add to his information about the college. He also plans to find out what committees are operating on campus, he said.

On his list of things to do is getting more positive publicity.

"We need to do a better job of telling people what's good about Chaffey," he said.

Young said he faced some of the same problems Chaffey has during his three years as president of Centralia.

He also is used to working under difficult conditions. He was at Kent State University in Ohio studying for his doctorate in counselor education when four students were shot and killed by the National Guard during a protest of the invasion of Cambodia in the early 1970s.

Interim Superintendent/President Otto Roemmich said now that Young's here, he will get to go on vacation. Roemmich has been filling in since last July, following termination of the contract with the college's previous president, Samuel Ferguson.

Danielle Schwartz of Alta Loma Junior High keeps score during the Ponom Valley Scholarship Bowl last Thursday. Students from Chaparral and De Anza Junior High schools are on stage answering questions.

Pioneer team wins Scholarship Bowl

Five 8th-graders from Pioneer Junior High School in Upland won the fourth annual Scholarship Bowl at Alta Loma Junior High School May 22.

Teams of five from De Anza Junior High, Imperial Junior High, Cucamonga Junior High, Magnolia Junior High, Ontario Christian Elementary, Alta Loma Junior High, and Chaparral Junior High joined the Pioneer students in competition.

The Pioneer team members were Bethanie Boswell, Scott Bordenkircher, Rudy Lai, Daryl

Tsai and Rahmi Mowjood.

The winners received trophies and certificates.

Participants competed from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., answering questions about music, history, language, science, math, spelling, and geography, said Alta Loma Junior High School principal Grace Longson.

"The very last question that won the competition was how words are arranged in the dictionary," Longson said. "Quick response and sheer luck really entered into it as much as knowledge."

Etiwanda students take writing honors

Fifteen students from the Etiwanda School District were honored for their writing abilities in a special school board meeting May 22.

The students competed May 17 and 18 at Crafton Hills College as part of an annual county "Writing Celebration."

The students were allowed to submit any kind of writing they wanted, from prose to poetry, said coordinator Rick von Kleist, of Summit Elementary School.

"There was no restriction on the type of writing they submitted," he said.

Entries were submitted after editing by classroom teachers.

"We've been in it (the writing contest) for about five years," von Kleist said.

The Summit School winners were: Shellie Etheridge, Amy Stodgen, Leigh Husok, Talitha Black, Reanadette Torres, Mary Auterson, Katie Thomas, and Johanna Young.

Summit School is a kindergarten-5th grade school.

Winners from Etiwanda Intermediate School were: Dawn Williams, Cynthia Fernandez, Malinda Cooper, Chris Robinson, Joey Gonzales, Chris Ryerson, and Amy Guttierrez.

Etiwanda Intermediate School is a 6th-8th grade school.

Raises in store for employees

Paychecks for non-teaching employees at Chaffey College will be more in line with what employees at other community colleges in the Inland Empire are making, following action by the college's governing board last week.

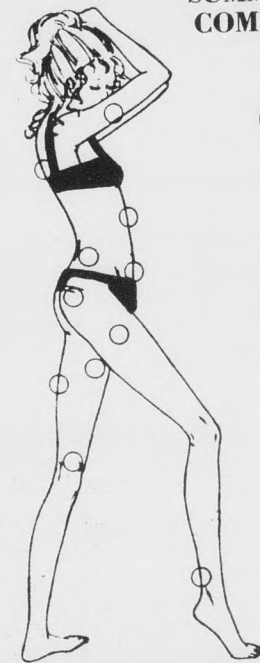

The board unanimously approved the recommendations of a two-year-old wage and salary study, meaning raises for 173 non-teaching staff members.

A smaller employee group not covered under the study also received raises effective June 1, totaling $20,022.

The raises for the larger employee group were outlined in See CHAFFEY/Page 12

Spokesman for home builder decries new lot size proposal

By Marianne Aiken

A representative of one of Rancho Cucamonga's major developers said he feels the company is being singled out by a controversial proposal to establish 6,000-square-foot minimum lot sizes.

Jim Bailey, regional manager of the William Lyon Co., which is building the gigantic Victoria Planned Community in Etiwanda, called the proposal "unfair" and "uncalled for."

Victoria has a community plan but no development agreement with the city.

Developments that have a development agreement, like nearby Terra Vista, built by Lewis Homes, would not be affected as much by the minimum lot-size proposal, said city planner Brad Buller.

The council has decided to consider the issue again at its meeting the first week of August, along with the related issue of minimum dwelling unit sizes, after a comprehensive study on the two issues is completed by the city staff.

The proposal by Councilman Dick Dahl would set a 6,000-

Upland may get new big Vons store

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Upland could be getting a new Vons grocery store, twice the size of the city's present store.

The company is ready to sign a contract to build a Vons Pavilion to anchor the city's Seventh/Mountain Redevelopment Project, according to Hank Gordon, chairman of the board of The Rainier Fund of Bellevue, Wash.

The firm is the general partner in the Seventh and Mountain Limited Partnership which has an exclusive contract with the city to negotiate with store owners for the property.

Gordon said all the buildings in the project east of Mountain Avenue and bordered by Eighth Street on the north and the San Bernardino Freeway on the south will be demolished to build a new shopping center with the Vons store.

But Assistant City Manager Mike Matlock said that it is too early to say whether the buildings will be torn down.

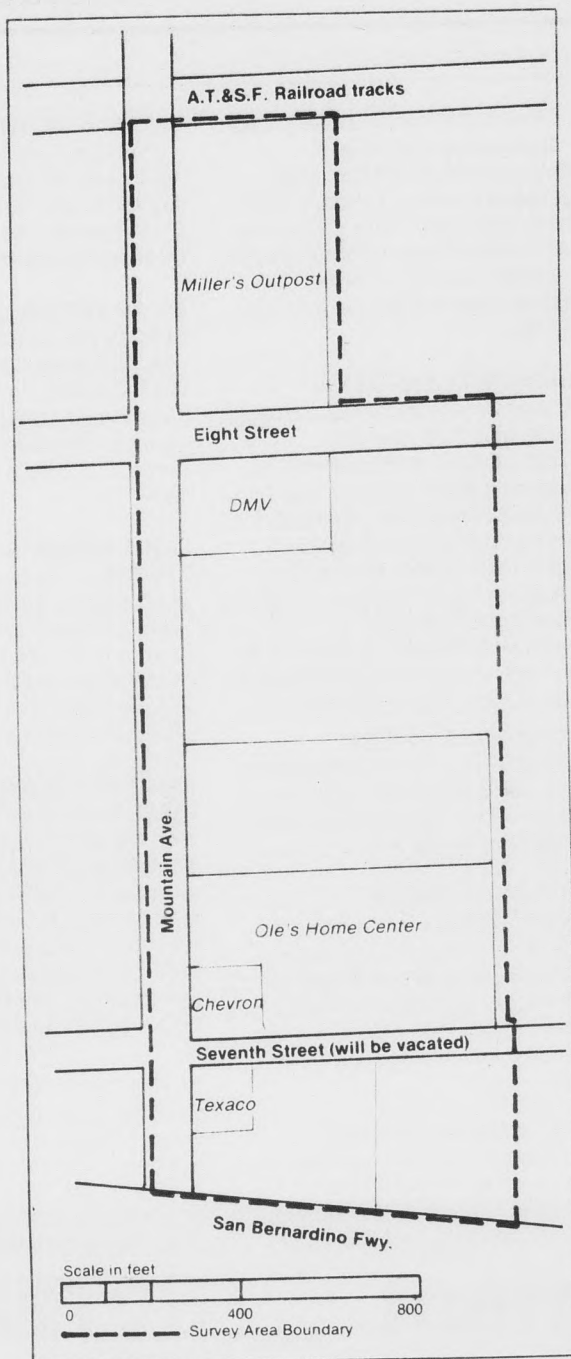

"I think that (demolishing) is what he envisions, but that's premature. There are still a lot of hurdles," he said.

Matlock added that the fate of the building now leased by the Department of Motor Vehicles has not been determined although the DMV has agreed to move.

The Miller's Outpost property on Mountain Avenue north of Eighth Street is officially included in the project, but the company is developing its lot on its own, according to a spokeswoman for the city's consultant firm, Gunn Russell Copenhaver & Co. Inc.

The project is designed to bring more shoppers and tax dollars to the area, while improving traffic flow at the same time. The $30 million proposal involves abandoning Seventh Street before it reaches the new center, rerouting it north along Alexander Avenue and widening Mountain Avenue.

The planned 70,000-square-foot Vons store will

Possible redevelopment considered for Upland area

By Kimberly Heinrichs

A citizen petition has resulted in the study of hundreds of acres in Upland's northeast quadrant for possible redevelopment.

Last fall, neighbors of the Great Western Rose Co. at 430 E. 19th Street protested its possible conversion to a church and school. They argued that severe traffic congestion in the area would only be aggravated with school traffic.

The protest prompted a study of the immediate area, which has grown into a survey of several hundred acres beginning a few blocks east of Euclid Avenue and ending at the city border, according to City Engineer Fred Blanchard.

The City Council has requested that its consultant firm, Gunn Russell Copenhagen & Co. Inc., study the area to see if it qualifies as a redevelopment area. That would make it eligible under federal law for special funding.

"Usually you study an area larger than you think you need because you can always reduce it, but you can't add to it,"

Blanchard explained.

He said that much of the land east of Campus Avenue is dotted with abandoned rock quarries and silt ponds from those operations.

The study will determine whether the pits should be filled, left as ponds or lakes and whether the land can ultimately be developed, he said.

Most of that property is owned by the San Antonio Water Co., Blanchard said. The water company is talking to a residential developer. Such a development would mean a change in the Upland General Plan and the zoning for the area, which is now designated open space, he said.

Bryce Russell, of the consultant firm, said he will also look at the different pieces of property lumped together in the study area, including fragments of railroad right-of-ways, a Metropolitan Water District pipeline and some odd-shaped lots.

"There was some doubt as to whether they could ever be developed," Russell said, adding that it can be difficult to get vacant property declared part of a redevelopment area.

United Way Inc.

The Mt. Baldy Region of United Way Inc. recently saluted its volunteers with a wine and hors d'oeuvres reception provided by the Clarion Hotel, Ontario.

Wallace J. Paprocki, region chairman, welcomed about 120 guests recognizing their participation as community leaders as well as their efforts on behalf of United Way and its member agencies.

Swim program

Registration is under way for the West End YMCA summer swim lessons. The group is offering a backyard swim program in Upland, Chino, Rancho Cucamonga, Montclair and Ontario.

For more information, call 986-5847.

The Backyard Swim program is taught on five levels: "Mommy/Daddy and Me" (six months old through walking); "Mommy/Daddy and Me II" (walking through 3 years old); beginner, advanced beginner and intermediate/advanced. Parent participation is required for the "Mommy/Daddy and Me" program, however parents are requested to leave the swimming areas for the other levels except on "parent" days.

The program classes will be in five two-week sessions.

Dogs on LEASHES, cats in BOXES

Over 3,300 Second District voters & EVERY city Councilmember in Upland, Fontana and Rancho Cucamonga (except his opponent) signed Supervisor Cal McElwain's nomination petition.

Here are a few good reasons why so many people support Supervisor Cal McElwain's re-election:

- Initiated the County Foothills Plan to assure continuity of development above your city AND to insure your city has input into the County's development plans.
- Supported and involved in negotiations to obtain land for Red Hill Park.
- Obtained temporary funding for Senior Citizens "hot meals" program when funding was delayed.
- Opposed the State's attempts to make the lands north of Rancho Cucamonga into a mining preserve.
- Gave key testimony in Sacramento to convince the California Transportation Commission to reinstate $7.3 MILLION for the Foothill Freeway.

We're NO. 1 in State for New or Relocating Plants!

Cal McElwain pushed to eliminate the County Department of Economic Development and to contract with an outside consultant to do a better job.

The results:

- 23 new manufacturing plants (TRIPLE that of 1984)!
- 3,500 new jobs initially. Capital investment of $100 million.
- San Bernardino County has had more new business and relocations than any other county in the State.

Cutting County Bureaucracy, Saving Over $8.7 MILLION

Supervisor Cal McElwain supported measures to eliminate several County departments and consolidate others saving taxpayers millions of dollars each year.

Without cutting services, Cal currently is pushing for measures to save an additional $652,000, just by reorganizing and streamlining County government.

"I've consistently proposed and voted for measures to save YOU . . . the taxpayer . . . money and still maintain vital services," says Supervisor McElwain.

The eighth graders on the "A" Honor Roll are: Cherish Allred, Rebecca Cauble, Elly Cheng, Randie Cloutier, Kami Hively, Kelley Karr, Serena Keeney, John Kim, Derek Mason, Rachel be twice the size of the Upland store at Euclid Avenue and Foothill Boulevard. The pavilion will include a drug store, Gordon said. The center also will contain numerous smaller stores connected to the pavilion, he said.

The shopping center will be located on the north side of what now is Seventh Street, Gordon said. On the south side, near the freeway, the firm plans to build a home center store. It offered the space to Ole's Home Center, which now sits on the other side of the street.

But Gordon said Ole's has turned them down and another chain, Home Depot, is ready to sign.

"They don't want to pay our rent. We don't want their size," Gordon said, explaining that his firm wanted Ole's to move and approximately double its size.

James Houghton, director of real estate for Ole's Home Centers in Brea, said that the city has hired contractors to appraise the property his company leases. Until that is finished, he said, it is too early to say whether Ole's will leave.

"It's a good store for us and we have not explored any other avenues," he said. "They've offered us space, but it's premature to discuss it."

Gordon said the partnership also is having trouble with owners of the property on which the Texaco and Chevron service stations sit.

"We've tried to buy the properties and to date the property owners and tenants have refused to go along with us," Gordon said, adding that his firm had considered gas stations for the project, but decided against them.

"It turns out that the shopping center and the city will be much better off without gas stations," he said.

Last month the partnership was granted a 30-day extension until mid-June to complete land negotiations so the city contractor's property appraisals can be finished.

Another reason was the problem with Ole's and the gas stations.

If the property owners and/or tenants refuse to move, Planning Director Bill Young said, the City Council could force them to leave through condemnation. But that is a last resort, he added.

If the City Council, acting as the Community Redevelopment Agency, likes the partnership's plan it will allow it to develop the 25-acre area. When the partnership closes escrow with Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan Association for 12 of the project's acres, it will own a total of 17 acres in the project area.

During his election campaign this spring, Councilman Al Canestro had said he would like to see a project drawing business from the Ontario International Airport in the area. But he said this project seems like a good one.

Ordinance not aimed at any business

By Marianne Aiken

An ordinance that will require all businesses with live entertainment to get a $75 permit every year is not aimed at any specific establishment, Rancho Cucamonga's City Attorney said.

Attorney James Markman said the idea behind the ordinance was to cut down on police calls to troublesome night spots, not to shut down any specific business.

"I want to indicate that isn't the case," Markman said. "We are not aiming at some nefarious way to get at a certain establishment."

The City Council passed the ordinance last Wednesday above the protests of one angry night spot owner who said the permit fee was an attempt by the city to financially burden small businesses.

"You're taxing the small business person out of business," said Robert Casaletti of Casaletti's in Etiwanda. Casaletti's has polka music and dancing.

"I don't know what the intent of the entertainment permit is," he said.

Mayor Jeff King said the fee just covers the cost of processing the permits.

"There's no intent of anybody to squeeze another buck out of anybody," King said.

Jim Frost, the city's first mayor and a former city councilmember, also criticized the ordinance.

"I see some loopholes in it," Frost said. "I'm sure the ladies of the Cowgirl know how to play the piano or the harp. I've been to dry states and you can always get a drink."

The Cowgirl Theater is a topless dancing bar on Foothill Boulevard near Rochester Avenue.

Places where entertainment is provided "solely by a piano player or harpist playing music for the amusement of guests or patrons" are listed under the six exclusions to the ordinance.

The ordinance covers people or business entities who operate "premises open to the public where food or beverages are sold, offered for sale, or given away, and where any form of entertainment" is provided.

It defines entertainment as "every form of live entertainment ... for the purpose of holding the attention and interest of" guests or patrons.

The ordinance goes into effect June 21, said City Clerk Beverly Authalet.

New businesses will have to apply for a permit before they commence entertainment, said Assistant City Attorney Andrew Arczynski. Existing businesses will have until Nov. 1 to file their applications for a permit.

For 1986, the entertainment permit is $40, payable upon application.

After the application is filed, an investigation follows, leading up to a public hearing before the planning commission.

New law may allow Upland to prosecute T&A Video

By Kimberly Heinrichs

A new state law that will take effect next January may allow Upland to prosecute T&A Video on the grounds of obscenity.

However, the video store owner's attorney, Roger Diamond, said he doesn't think the new law will affect his client's store. He said the material it carries still won't be defined as obscene, even under the stricter law.

The bill signed into law last month by Gov. Deukmejian changes the legal definition of obscenity from that which is "utterly without redeeming social importance," to that which "lacks significant literary, artistic, political, educational or scientific value."

Upland City Attorney Don Maroney said the new definition will make it easier to prosecute stores like T&A Video. The store, located at 2121 W. Foothill Blvd., rents X-rated videotapes and sells videos, reading material and related paraphernalia.

"You certainly would have a great deal more freedom," Maroney said. "I think it will give the relief ... that the community needs to relieve itself of the material which is probably more than without significant redeeming value."

He added that in order to prosecute the Upland Police Department would have to investigate and confiscate obscene materials. The city then

'Wish list' makes council think ahead

By Kimberly Heinrichs

A "wish list" of more than $6.5 million in water projects presented by Upland's Water Utility Director Larry Dilley has the City Council thinking ahead.

Dilley drew up the list at the request of the council's Water and Sewer Committee after it learned that federal income tax reform could change the city's tax advantages for municipal bonds after Sept. 1.

In addition, interests are quite low right now, City Finance Director Phyllis Proctor pointed out.

"I don't think there'll ever be a better time," she said. "Interest rates are good (and) construction rates never go down."

As a result, the council is considering selling bonds or similar financing in order to build new reservoirs, a water treatment plant and other projects before they are absolutely needed. The city would save money in the long run, Proctor said.

"It's always nice to have too much storage rather than not enough," Dilley said, adding that two of the reservoirs would be needed within five years anyway.

Other projects would replace old, deteriorating equipment before it actually stops working, he said.

Dilley's list included:

- a 5-million gallon reservoir at 19th Street and Campus Ave. for $1 million.

- a 5-million gallon reservoir at 15th Street and Campus Ave. for $1 million.

- a 5-million gallon water-per-day treatment plant and 2.5 million gallon reservoir at Mountain Lane and San Antonio Dam in San Antonio Heights for $2.37 million.

- five water production wells in several still undetermined locations for $1.25 million.

- replacement of inadequate old water pipelines in the southeast portion of the city for $925,000.

Because San Antonio residents have expressed concern over the water treatment plant, Councilman Frank Carpenter, a member of the Water and Sewer Committee, received permission from Mayor Richard Anderson to hold an informal public hearing for them.

Carpenter said the residents have drawn up a petition protesting the project after they received a form from the federal government about an environmental study. However, the councilman said that when he talked to one of the petitioners they both realized it was a case of lack of communication.

"I don't believe they know much about the project and I think they want to," he said.

Dilley said the water treatment plant is especially feasible because it would capture water right out of the canyon during the wet seasons and let it flow through the system by gravity.

Currently, most of the water is collected below 16th Street, Dilley said, and the city must spend extra money to pump the water back up to the homes north of the wells.

the recommendations of a $55,000 study by Hay Associates, to bring employees' salaries more in line with market levels.

Board approval followed a vote May 8 in which 80 percent of the members of the Chaffey College Chapter of the California School Employees Association (CSEA) endorsed the district's proposal.

"I was horrified when I saw how low the salaries were when I arrived here," said interim Superintendent/President Otto Roemmich during the board's vote.

Roemmich complimented CSEA leaders for being friendly and easy to deal with during negotiations.

CSEA President Dixon Wolf said the association voted to accept the district's offer two weeks ago "based on an understanding of the district's financial position for the coming year."

Wolf described the raises as bringing salaries up to a "median" level compared with other community colleges.

For the 173-member group covered under the study by Hay Associates, this will mean raises averaging between 2.83 and 9.87 percent for the period of May 1-July 1, then another increase July 1 averaging between 17.37 and 24.31 percent.

Acting director of personnel Patricia Morrison told the board, when arguing for the raises in March, that the college has a difficult time attracting qualified applicants because of the low pay on campus.

Three qualify as write-in candidates

By Don Green

Three candidates, including a father and daughter, qualified this week to have their write-in votes counted in the June 3 primary election.

R. "Sarge" Hall of El Mirage, a retired non-commissioned officer, filed as a write-in candidate for the American Independent Party in the 35th Congressional District.

He fell short of the 40 valid signatures needed on his nomination papers to qualify as a write-in with the Republican Party.

Rep. Jerry Lewis, R-Redlands, is seeking re-election in the heavily Republican district, which includes all of the West Valley except Ontario and Fontana.

Hall's name is on the ballot as the only Democrat seeking the party's nomination in the 35th District. Hall has made a habit of multiple candidacies.

In 1984, his name was on the ballot as a candidate in 1st District seat for county supervisor, while he ran as a write-in candidate for both the Democratic and AIP nominations in the congressional district. He lost in all three attempts.

Attorney Riley Williams and his daughter, Sonya Smith, who works as a legal researcher in his office, both filed as write-in candidates on Tuesday, the last day to qualify. Both are residents of Lake Arrowhead.

Williams is running for Office No. 13 of the Superior Court. Judge James Edwards is the incumbent, and attorney Sidney Jones of Upland is challenging him on the ballot.

Smith is running for county treasurer-tax collector. Incumbent Joe Bell previously was unopposed.

Williams said he chose Edwards' seat because it was the only Superior Court office still open. However, Gerane Jacobsen said that a write-in candidate could actually have run for any of four Superior Court judgeships where the incumbent already faces one or more challengers on the ballot.

The attorney said improvements are needed in the administration of criminal law and stressed that the law is intended to provide "equal protection." While in favor of capital punishment when decisions are reached fairly, Williams said death-penalty sentences are biased against poor defendants.

He added that his daughter decided on her own to run for treasurer-tax collector.

While the father-daughter tandem qualified as write-in candidates, the older half of a brother combination did not.

James Norton of Fontana had taken out papers to run as a write-in candidate for the Republican nomination in the 36th Congressional District.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY — More than 400 Upland third graders, right, released balloons into the air to celebrate their city's 80th birthday last Wednesday. The elementary students who are studying Upland history, heard presentations by Mayor Richard Anderson on past mayors, and by Children's Librarian Marie Rooth on Uplander Esther Bolton Black, the author of their history book. Later Councilman Frank Carpenter, above, shared a laugh with Bea Riggs, director of the Chaffey Communities Cultural Center. Riggs was honored at a Chamber of Commerce and city mixer celebration, for her many years of volunteer work for the city. The Chaffey College Jazz Band entertained.

RETIRING — Connie Shurte, a first-grade teacher at Alta Loma Elementary School, will retire at the end of this school term. Shurte has taught kindergarten, first, and second grades at Alta Loma Elementary School for 27 years. The school's 1985-86 Chieftan yearbook is dedicated to her.

would request the District Attorney's office to take on the case, he said.

Lou Sheldon, the state chairman of the Traditional Values Coalition which helped lobby for the passage of the bill, said he expects a lot of general law cities like Upland to incorporate portions of the bill in their city ordinances.

Sheldon, who works out of Anaheim, said California had one of the more liberal definitions of obscenity in the country before the new law.

Local protesters of the video store have high hopes that the new law will force the store and others like it out of business.

"We'll prosecute these people to the hilt — until they shut down or are forced to leave town," said Rancho Cucamonga resident Mark Huffman, the local representative of the National Federation for Decency.

But Diamond doubts that the law will make much difference in his client's case. He pointed out that even if Upland does persuade the district attorney's office to prosecute, it still would be up to a jury to determine whether the material was obscene or not.

"I don't think it's going to have any significance. Most juries believe in freedom unless it deals with children or deals with animals or deals with violence or deals with excretion," he said. "But if the material, on the other hand, just deals with sexual activities among consenting adults, I don't think it will make much of a difference."

Quarter vs. semester systems eyed

By Marianne Aiken

Chaffey College would have to fight to switch from the quarter system to the semester system, an economics professor told the college's governing board last week.

Craig Justice said a survey conducted by the faculty senate showed the majority of students want the quarter system, the four-year schools in the area are on the quarter system, and switching to the semester system would deplete the college's budget reserves.

Justice touched off a long debate — conducted mostly in numbers — on the virtues of having two longer grading periods a year (the semester system) versus three shorter ones (the quarter system).

Some staff members disagreed with Justice, saying students need more time to absorb information, office workers need more time to process paperwork, and Joe Ruttman takes the low groove during a recent race on the NASCAR circuit. The former Upland resident will return to Riverside International Raceway this Sunday in Kenny Bernstein's Quaker State Buick to compete in the Budweiser 400. Ruttman is still seeking his first NASCAR victory, although he's finished second on two occasions this year.

Homecoming week for Ruttman

It is homecoming this week for Winston Cup regular Joe Ruttman.

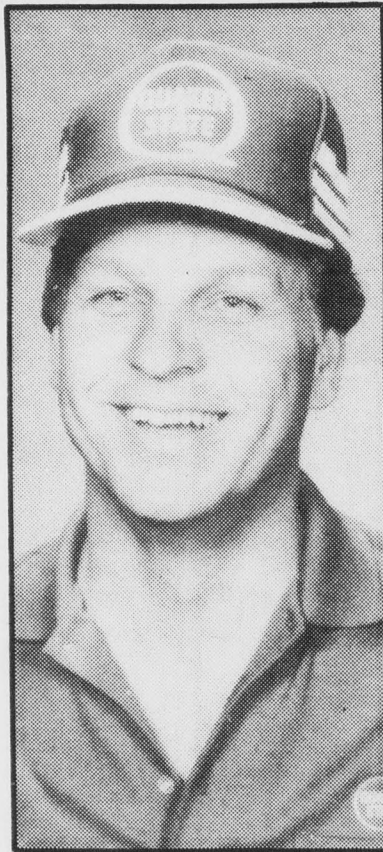

With Sunday's 18th running of the Budweiser 400, the 41-year-old Ruttman returns to Upland, the city from which he migrated five years ago.

More important from a career standpoint, however, is his return to Riverside International Raceway, the 2.62-mile road course on which he made his first NASCAR start and on which he came so close to claiming an initial Winston Cup victory.

Twice this season, Ruttman has run second in the king Racing-prepared Quaker State Buick LeSabre he came so close to claiming an initial Winston Cup victory.

Twice this season, Ruttman has run second in the King Racing-prepared Quaker State Buick LeSabre he is driving this season for car owner Kenny Bernstein of Newport Beach.

Second place at Richmond, Va., on Feb. 23 and second at Martinsville, Va., on April 27 he duplicated his finish in the second of two Winston Riverside in 1981.

In that race, he drove a Western 500's contested at Buick Regal across the finish line behind veteran Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala. He did not get that close to victory again until he joined the Quaker State/King Racing Team at the outset of the 1986 season.

In position to win five of his last six starts, Ruttman finally believes he is aligned with a team that can challenge for the Winston Cup title.

It is the kind of situation he has been seeking since he left Southern California for Oakboro, N.C.

Of course, this week's homecoming presents some problems, too.

For one thing, it is the first road course race for 26-year-old crew chief Larry McReynolds and the rest of the Quaker State/King Racing crew.

For another, it puts Ruttman back on a road course for the first time since 1984 when he ran seventh in the sprint race and tenth in the fall. He missed both races last year while running only a limited schedule for Morgan-McClure Racing.

Nevertheless, the former United States Auto Club Stock Car Division Champion (1980) doesn't anticipate any real problems in readjusting to the twisting Riverside course that soon is destined to go the way of Ontario Motor Speedway.

Although Ruttman has only been a Winston Cup regular since 1981, he has been driving the historic Riverside track since 1963 when, as an 18-year-old kid, he finished tenth in his first NASCAR start.

Ruttman apprenticed in a USAC stock car campaigned by Howard Welch of Hacienda Heights.

It was through Welch that Bernstein and Ruttman got together.

Through his Haddick's Towing Service, Welch was involved in both stock car racing and drag racing. Among those with whom he worked in drag racing was Bernstein, the reigning Winston World Funny Car Champion.

"Howard recommended him," Bernstein said of Ruttman, "so when we finally put the team together, he was my first choice."

CIF honors trio for top academics

Three local students — one from Alta Loma High School and two from Upland — will be honored this evening for academic excellence at Anaheim Stadium.

The first CIF-Southern Section Academic Awards Program will precede tonight's game between the California Angels and Baltimore Orioles.

Each school was given an opportunity to single out a boy and girl "Student Athlete of the Year." To qualify for the individual award, applicants were required to meet the following criteria:

A senior with a minimum 3.5 GPA in college prep courses for 2½ years; participated in at least one varsity sport and two other extracurricular activities, or two varsity sports.

Andrew Olander was the Alta Loma winner with a perfect 4.0 GPA.

Upland winners included Greg Guymon (3.71) and Amy Callow (3.93).

"When we initiated the corporate sponsorship program in 1980, we didn't just want their financial contributions, we wanted their skills, ideas and abilities to encourage and challenge our students athletes," said CIF-SS commissioner Ray Plutko.

S.B. City Library may be used as R.C. model

By Marianne Aiken

The San Bernardino City Library should be used as a model for a future additional branch library in Rancho Cucamonga, according to members of a cultural task force.

The task force issued a list of the cultural priorities of Rancho Cucamonga to the mayor and City Council last week, representing both local and regional activities, said task force chairman Donald Hardy.

The most significant needs identified by the task force, in priority order, are:

- Library facilities;
- A theater for the performing arts;
- Art in public places;
- Museums and exhibit galleries;
- Archives;
- Resource development.

The task force recommended that an additional library branch should be a "multi-dimensional/educational center," and should be located in Rancho Cucamonga City Park, a 99-acre park north of Base Line Road between Milliken Avenue and the Deer Creek channel, the report stated.

A 2.6-acre site adjacent to the civic center is recommended as a good location for a theater complex. Three other potential locations, including the 99-acre park, land adjacent to a proposed regional shopping center, and a possible land donation by Chaffey College, should also be studied, the report said.

The city should provide incentives to developers to install art in public places, the task force recommended.

And Rancho Cucamonga should join with other cities in the area to encourage community support for the Rex W. Wignall Museum/Gallery.

The historic Chaffey-Garcia house in Etiwanda, which is currently undergoing an extensive renovation, and the Rains House might also be added to the list of museum resources that should be supported, Hardy said.

Under the archives recommendation, the report notes that space for preservation of historically significant documents and records is already included in the civic center plans.

The money to support the cultural recommendations could come from donations of the Rancho Cucamonga Cultural Foundation, federal and state grants, use of the redevelopment agency tax increment, donations of services and supplies, or contributions from the city's general fund, the report stated.

Community Foundation in R.C. approved

The articles of incorporation and bylaws for the Rancho Cucamonga Community Foundation were approved by the City Council last Wednesday.

The next step is to nominate and select the foundation's board of directors in 2-3 months, administrative analyst Mark Lorimer told the council.

The foundation will provide a vehicle of support for the city's cultural, recreational, and human service needs, according to the articles of incorporation.

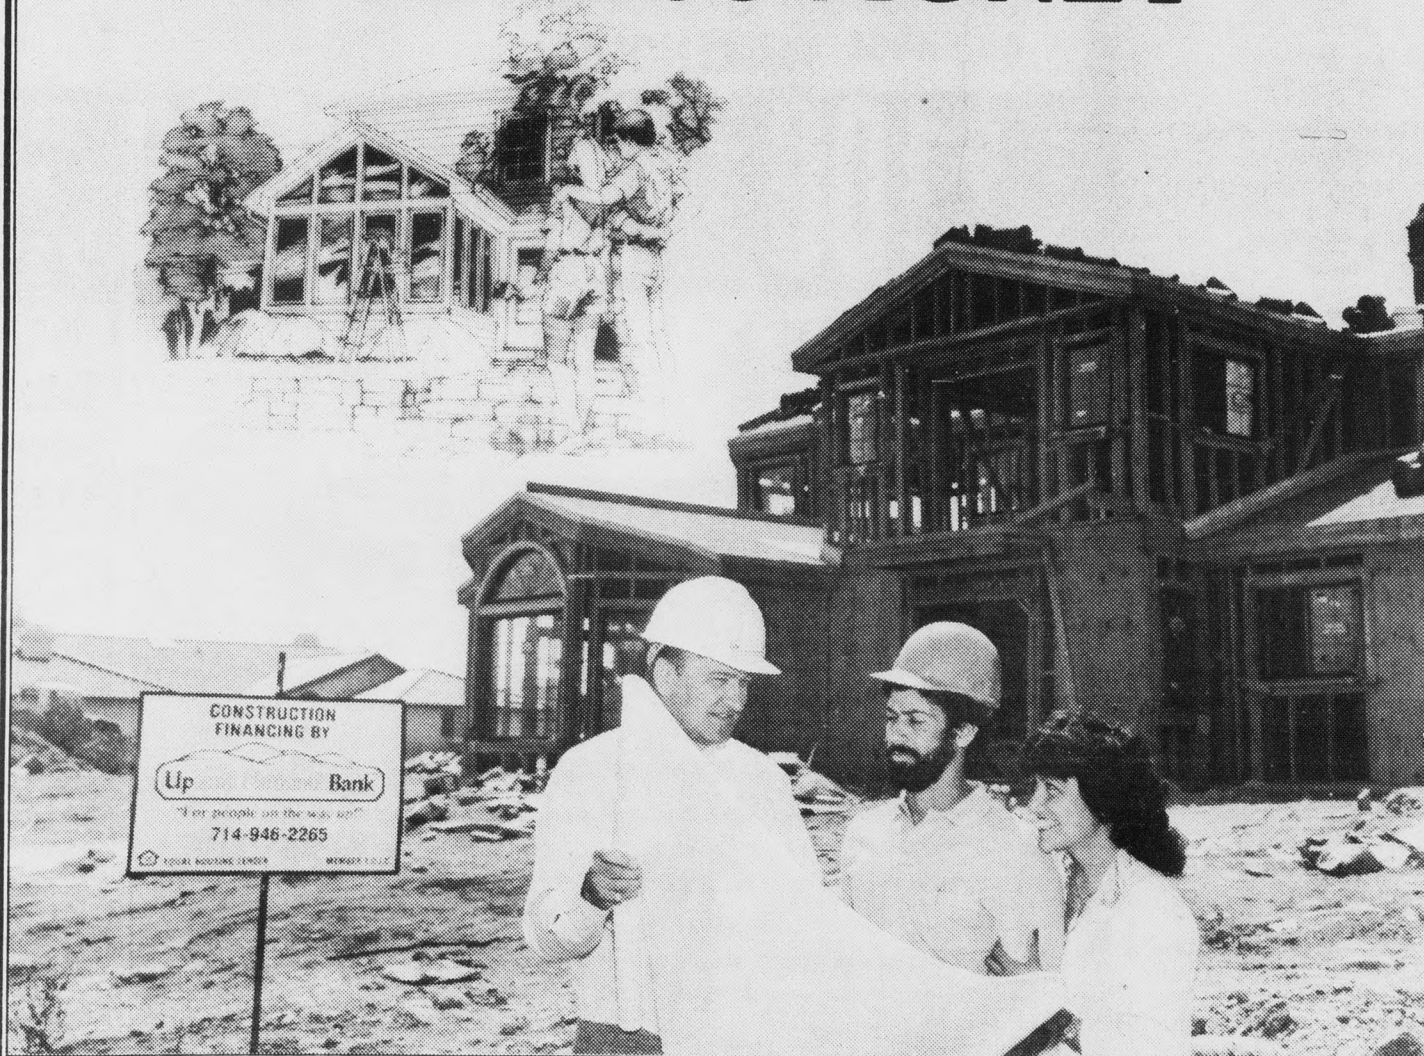

The board of directors will consist of five members, one nominated by each of the council members, to serve terms coinciding with the terms of each council member.

The foundation's budget for the 1986-87 fiscal year includes $6,000 in revenue from fund-raising activities, plus corporate, individual, and public agency contributions.

The foundation is projected to spend $5,300 in travel and meetings, office supplies, promotion and printing, postage, and contract services.

counselors need more time to counsel.

The board took no action on the information-only item.

Chaffey College switched from the semester system to the quarter system in 1971.

George Colbath, who is retiring this year after a 33-year tenure at the college, said Justice's argument that the college's schedule should stay in line with that of the area's four-year institutions is "irrelevant" because only 7 percent of Chaffey's students transfer into a four-year college.

"We used to call this crap," Colbath said of Justice's six-page document of facts and figures supporting the quarter system.

"The only other document that's worse than that is the spring schedule. I'm ashamed as an educator to say that I had anything to do with this," Colbath said, holding up the schedule book.

Switching to the semester system would cut down on the amount and intensity of paperwork in the admissions and records office, said supervisor Elida Espinoza.

Counselor Elizabeth Stark said for eight weeks of the 11½-week term, the counseling staff is working at a peak level.

"If we were on a semester system, we'd have more time to respond to the needs of the community," she said.

Another member of the counseling staff, Howard Theuer, said keeping the quarter system because it's popular with students would be "sacrificing quality to gain enrollment at the expense of education."

Justice said one option the school could take is adopting the "flex" system, which shortens the 175-day calendar year by up to 15 days for students, and allows faculty to take those days to do in-service training or other projects of their own design.

Eligible recipients are encouraged to attend the distribution in the city or zip code in which they reside as there will be no make-up dates.

People must be 18 years or older in order to qualify to receive commodities and only one allocation should be received per household. Eligible recipients are requested to bring a container for their commodities.

Passbook savings accounts still thriving

The passbook savings account, that old-fashioned, dog-eared vault for your allowance as a kid, still holds a staggering $300 billion in depositors' money and is defying even its recent deregulation, a survey of the banking industry indicates.

But the passbook's days as a simple savings tool may be numbered, and passbook holders who have refused to take part in bank and thrift deregulation may find that deregulation is coming to them, industry observers say.

All interest rate restrictions were lifted from passbooks on April 1, but since that date the accounts have continued to take in funds at their traditional 5.5 percent interest rate. Guarding the huge pot of cheap money, banks are cautiously watching each other and so far have refused to either raise or lower passbook rates.

Despite four years of competition from higher yielding money market accounts, there is a shrinking but still substantial clientele for the simple passbooks, which permit instant deposits and withdrawals. A Federal Reserve official in San Francisco on Wednesday pegged total passbook deposits at $306.5 billion.

California-based banks continue to hold billions in passbook accounts, including about $2 billion at Security Pacific National Bank, representing 6 percent of deposits, a bank spokesman said. Bank of America said it has about $4.5 billion in its passbook accounts. "We seem to be picking up more and more (passbook accounts) every day," said David Taber, vice president of American River Bank in Sacramento.

"The passbook just remains an awfully convenient place to keep money," said Jim Kendall, vice president of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions in Washington, D.C.

Others in the industry note that money market rates have fallen close to passbook rates. "When you are talking such a small percentage there is less reason for a person to move that money," said Bill Bucy of Security Pacific.

But some industry observers insist that the passbook's simple days are numbered, and they are warning all depositors with small accounts to be careful about growing fees and minimum balance charges. "You might say this is the era of the silent, creeping, crawling fees," said Robert K. Heady, publisher of the Bank Rate Monitor in North Palm Beach, Fla.

Heady, who keeps an eye on rates nationwide, confirmed that with a few exceptions, passbook rates across the nation have remained at 5.5 percent since the April 1 deregulation. But he said banks appear to be reacting to their newfound freedoms by gradually introducing "hybrid" accounts that merge the simplicity of the old passbooks with money market features.

Banks and thrifts also are creating more kinds of savings accounts, and are paying different interest rates for different minimum balances, he said.

"There is some $305 billion up for grabs in cheap, 5.5 percent money, and the banks are not about to lose out on that opportunity in terms of increasing market share," Heady said.

But Heady cautioned that depository institutions also are setting a growing number of fees and charges on small accounts, including "account maintenance" fees and penalties for allowing savings and checking account balances to drop below certain levels.

Whether a customer is opening a passbook or other account, he or she can save a lot of money by asking all banks and thrifts one question, Heady said: "If I give you my money today, how much will I have in the account at the end of a year, in dollars and cents?"

Heady believes that except for those depositors wedded to the past, passbook accounts eventually "are headed for the dust bin." But he also acknowledges that many banks and thrifts have yet to make a move in the wake of the April 1 deregulation.

"They are cautiously watching their competitors," he said, adding that a few banks have raised passbook account rates to 6.5 percent or lowered them to 4.5 percent.

California-based banks and thrifts surveyed said they are holding their passbook rates steady, but some also are levying fees on accounts falling below minimum levels.

Law and Justice Center edged out for ASCE award

The Foothill Communities Law and Justice Center in Rancho Cucamonga was edged out for a national engineering award by a Chicago tunnel project, a spokeswoman for the architects said last week.

After the local $38.9 million courthouse was named earlier this year as the "outstanding building" by the San Bernardino, Riverside and Los Angeles county sections of the American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE), local engineers were saying the facility had a good chance of winning the ASCE's national award.

The building was hailed for its innovative use of base isolators, shock absorber-like devices that protect a building from damage during earthquakes. The Foothill courthouse is the largest building in the world, and the first building in the United States, to contain base isolators.

But the unofficial notice received by the architectural firm of Metcalf and Eddy Inc. said that the county courthouse was not selected as the winner.

The outstanding civil engineering project of 1986 is a "large tunnel and reservoir plan" by the Metropolitan Sanitation District of Greater Chicago, according to Ginny Hebert, an administrative analyst for the courthouse's architect.

The official notice of the award will be contained in the July issue of ASCE's magazine, which will also profile all of the regional award winners including the Foothill courthouse, Hebert said.

The Foothill courthouse, off Haven Avenue, was dedicated in March but delays in ordering furniture and redoing woodwork in courtrooms have pushed back its completion date to September, a year later than it was originally scheduled to be completed.

Some silver furniture still extant in English collections

Silver furniture was made extensively in England between 1660 and 1710 after the French Baroque style at Saint-Cloud and Versailles.

In France almost every known piece was melted down to help pay for the wars in Flanders in the late 17th century, but important pieces still survive in English collections.

However, only complete suites of silver furniture remain, one at Windsor Castle and the other at Knole in Kent, the latter for 400 years the Sackville family seat and the girlhood home of author Victoria Sackville-West.

Cars sport sunglasses

By Cynthia Hunter

It's not enough for a Southern Californian to own a pair of sunglasses. Now cars need shades, too.

A glimpse at many parking lots these days and some may wonder if the heat is getting to them.

Well, they're right about the heat.

Sunglasses, rainbows, American flags and even the St. Louis arch can be found behind car windshields these days as fashionable sun blocks.

Designed to keep the car cool, the dashboard from cracking and upholstery from fading, the cardboard shades fit inside the car's front window.

Many of the shades have "emergency" printed on the reverse side.

"They've been just a smokin' mover," said manager Mike Gerard at Pep Boys in Rancho Cucamonga, which has sold thousands since the first shipment last summer.

People usually buy two or three at a time, he continued. "I feel like it's a mother buying them for all the kids."

Foreign visitors are particularly impressed, he said. "You can tell them because they buy 10 or 12!"

The cardboard strips sell between $1.99 and $5.

"For that expense it's well worth it," said Ontario resident Jim Tower, who purchased his two shades a fortnight ago.

"It's a little nuisance, but I think it's worth the time spent," he said of installation and removal of the shades.

The boards first reached the market's limelight around January 1985, said Victor Lowe, president of Cool Car Corp. in Century City, one of the larger manufacturers. Lowe expects to sell 5 million this year.

At first, skeptics said the shades were gimmicks and would never last, Lowe said.

Like their owners, many cars are sporting sunglasses to block the sun.

Steps to help make your child a lifelong reader

PHILADELPHIA — "Mommy, what's this word?"

Your 7-year-old is reading to you, and points to a simple word, one you think a second grader should know.

Do you give her the word immediately? Do you try to get her to sound it out? Do you encourage her by saying "You can read that?"

Are you feeling tense? Tests will do that to you. That's why you shouldn't make reading with your child into one, says Jacquelyn Gross, author of "Make Your Child a Lifelong Reader" (Jeremy P. Tarcher, $6.95).

That's why, while you should read to your child as much as possible, you shouldn't force your child to read to you.

"I don't much like the parent having the child read aloud. I like the idea of the child wanting to read to the parent, when it's the child who initiates the project," says Gross.

If your child is reading to you, resist the urge to correct him or insert a word he has skipped over — unless the child asks. If he asks, give the word. "But the business of saying, 'Go on, you can do it, you can figure it out' is really destructive," says Gross. "It's like telling a deaf person, 'If you just listen harder, you'll hear.'"

"That's what we do to kids and that makes it embarrassing for them, and difficult, and they don't feel successful."

Reading at home should always be fun — especially for a child who is having a hard time in school. If he's being reminded every day in school that he's not a good reader, he doesn't need to fail in front of his parents, too.

A child who believes he's a poor reader will be a poor reader. To such a kid, reading isn't fun or informative. It's scary.

So parents should read to their children, and share the information or entertainment or excitement that comes from the book or magazine. That, more than anything else, will help your child want to read.

Resist any attempts by your child's teacher to get you to repeat reading schoolwork at home, says Gross. That just reinforces all the negative feelings that a child gets from reading. "What a parent needs to do is make reading a loving, fulfilling interaction," says Gross.

Unfortunately, the schools are doing just the opposite, she says.

It all began with Sputnik. When the Russians launched the satellite, says Gross, Americans launched a crash education program, mostly in the sciences. But even they realized that reading was essential to learning anything else.

When government got involved in funding the programs, it demanded accountability — that is, you had to be able to test how well you were doing.

The result: the teaching of reading was broken down into hundreds of little tasks, almost like an assembly line. The important thing about the tasks was not that they teach kids to read better than the old methods did. The important thing was that the tasks could be tested.

Exit the book. Enter the workbook.

To too many kids, reading is a question of filling in the blanks. They fill in "cat" where there's a picture of one. They fill in "bat" in the rhyming exercise. When the standardized test is given, they do it over again.

"It's meaningless," says Gross. "They go through the routine if they're conforming kinds of children, and maybe they learn the mechanics of reading, but they don't become lifelong readers."

"Schools are so hooked on the skills of reading that they never get around to the part that really is reading — which is dealing with interesting, connected text that will give the children some kind of insight into their own lives, into the pleasure that reading can be," says Gross.

"The current system bores children, it frustrates them, and finally it really scares them as well," she says. "And it never does the one thing that it really must do to make children readers — and that is to prove that that there is some kind of payoff to reading."

It's become fashionable to blame television for the fact that so many Americans cannot read. But Gross believes that TV is a scapegoat used by those who don't want to look at the faults of the way we teach reading.

TV is entertaining and easy. If we focused on what makes reading entertaining, Gross asserts, children would read as much as they watch TV.

Worth noting: With television, there are no tests.

Signs of a dog's false pregnancy

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.
Copley News Service

Q: Our 2-year-old female poodle-cross recently appeared to be pregnant. However, she has never been bred. Her personality changed and her mammary glands became swollen. What caused this strange behavior in our dog?

A: Your dog most likely had a false pregnancy, also called pseudopregnancy. False pregnancy usually occurs two to three months after the dog was last seen in heat. The most commonly noticed signs include mammary development, lactation and personality changes.

In some dogs there are signs similar to those observed normally just prior to a normal whelping. These include nervousness, excitability, trembling, panting, restlessness and attempts to build a nest in a quiet place. Later behavior is similar to that normally seen during the nursing period following whelping. Toys, bones and other objects, or puppies and kittens, if available, are mothered by the affected dog.

Milk may be present in the mammary glands for two weeks or longer. The degree of swelling of the mammary glands will vary. The glands may be warmer than the rest of the dog's body and may be painful when touched. A white discharge from the vulva may be present. Swelling of the abdomen as if pregnant is very common. Abdominal contractions that mimic those of whelping occasionally occur. Many bitches with pseudopregnancy will have digestive upsets like those seen occasionally during the weaning period. These may include vomiting and diarrhea.

The signs of pseudopregnancy have also been seen in dogs spayed three to four days earlier. This usually only occurs in dogs spayed shortly after being in heat. With the exception of having puppies, pseudopregnant dogs look and act like they are pregnant and are about to or just have whelped.

Apparently, there is no breed or age of dog which is more likely to become pregnant. It has been observed in 6-month-old dogs following their first heat period and in dogs over 7 years old. Most dogs presented for treatment are between 2 and 6 years of age.

Although there is no apparent breed predisposition, there does seem to be certain families of dogs that are more susceptible. It is not uncommon for bitches to have recurrences after each heat period. Usually these bouts of pseudopregnancy do not affect later fertility.

Veterinarians make the diagnosis of pseudopregnancy based on the animal's reproductive history and physical examination. Blood count and X-ray techniques are often used to differentiate this condition from actual pregnancy or severe uterine infections.

Treatment of pseudopregnancy varies with the severity of the particular case. Most mild cases do not require treatment. In severe cases, drugs can be used to relieve the discomfort. In dogs with recurring or severe false pregnancies, spaying is usually the best solution.

False pregnancy is not uncommon in intact female dogs following heat during which breeding did not occur.

Lees triplets show biz vets at the age of 1

By Suzanne Sproul

Ashley, Brittany and Lindsay Lees are Hollywood acting veterans at the ripe old age of 1.

The Ontario triplets of Toni and Larry Lees auditioned and won a place on the hit television series St. Elsewhere when they were 3 weeks old last year.

The identical triplets celebrated their first birthday last week and one year of excitement on the television filming set.

"A friend of mine had a friend who worked with people who needed children for television commercials and things like that. I decided to send in a snap shot of the girls because I thought the extra money would really help with doctor bills, their food and diapers," Mrs. Lees said.

Two days later the Hollywood agent called the family and told them the television series needed an infant girl right away. The Ontario triplets were cast as the granddaughter of the feisty Dr. Mark Craig, portrayed by actor William Daniels.

According to strict child labor laws, infants can't remain under television lights and on the set for more than 30 seconds and 30 minutes at any one time, respectively. So the triplets share the role.

A child welfare worker and a pediatric nurse were assigned to the girls from the start and the studio sent a car for them and their mom each time the show was taped, Mrs. Lees said.

"I really didn't have to worry about them at all. I was there, and in some cases I think they were a little overprotected," she said.

"We expected the girls to be on the show maybe once or twice, but when the show finished taping this year they told us they would see us again in June. As far as we know, we'll be back next season."

The past year has been filled with excitement, she said. It started when the girls were born.

The family already had three boys — Jared, Mark and Daniel — and they were expecting one more child. Instead, the Lees had triplets. Suddenly their family swelled from five to eight members.

"At first it was very difficult because my husband and I were only getting about one or two hours of sleep every night.

But now they're crawling and active.

"It's really interesting to see how they are. They're not shy with people because they've been used to having lots of people around them since they were born," Mrs. Lees said.

"I never wanted my kids to be in show business but the extra money has helped. I know it's been a whole year since they were born, but the newness just hasn't worn off. It's still a lot of fun."

Competitors trying to freeze out popular Eskimo Pie

SACRAMENTO — Eskimo Pie Corp. has long been king of the hill in the $1.5 billion frozen snack business. But the Richmond, Va.-based producer of ice cream novelty products now is finding its dominance threatened by a swarm of deep-pocketed competitors.

Challengers include the producers of Jell-O Pudding Pops, Oreo ice cream sandwiches, Haagen-Daz ice cream bars and Dole fruit bars.

"They're all rolling in with heavy-duty marketing campaigns," said Fenton Hord, Eskimo Pie's president. As a result, the novelty business has been transformed from what Hord calls the "sleepy corner of the ice cream case" to one of the food industry's competitive hot spots.

"Not a day goes by when your pulse isn't beating and your adrenaline isn't flowing," Hord said in an interview here. To maintain its position of prominence, Eskimo Pie is revamping its manufacturing system and gearing up its own multimillion-dollar advertising effort. The firm's biggest advantage, according to Hord, is its heritage. "We're fortunate because we're viewed as a little bit of Americana," he said.

The company was formed in 1921, soon after an Iowa candy store owner named Christian Nelson discovered how to make melted chocolate stick to a bar of ice cream. (The secret was the use of cocoa butter.) Nelson initially called his product the "I-Scream-Bar" but soon changed the name to Eskimo Pie at the suggestion of his partner, Russell Stover, who went on to make a name for himself in the candy business.

Under a system that remains today, Nelson and Stover licensed ice cream manufacturers to produce the frozen pies. Nelson and Stover provided the chocolate and wrappings; the licensees provided the ice cream and the sticks.

Since the start, Eskimo Pies have been the nation's top-selling ice cream novelties and, according to Hord, now account for about 7 percent of total sales in the frozen snack business.

But the company has been facing increasing competition since 1983 when General Foods went national with its Jell-O Pudding Pops. Since then, Pillsbury's Haagen-Daz unit has introduced its own upscale chocolate-covered bars, Nabisco has come out with Oreo ice cream sandwiches and Castle & Cook has begun selling Dole fruit bars.

Other food industry giants, like Coca-Cola, United Brands and General Mills also have introduced novelty products, as have regional firms.

"It used to be that frozen snacks were the sleepy, undermarketed part of the ice cream case," Hord said. Now, he said, the segment is growing at a rate of almost 10 percent a year in terms of unit sales.

Advertising expenditures, meanwhile, have climbed to $44 million from just $1.8 million in 1980, a 2,300 percent increase, according to Hord. Eskimo Pie's advertising efforts have kept pace, jumping from $2.6 million in 1984 to $4.6 million last year. Eskimo Pie's media buys are expected to top $7 million this year, Hord said.

More significant, the company has revamped the way it manufactures its frozen confections. In the past, the firm licensed unlimited numbers of manufacturers to produce its products, which include Welch's

Fruit Juice Bars as well as the original Eskimo Pie bars in three sizes and three flavors.

But last year it canceled its 110 existing agreements and instituted new licensing arrangements with just 42 companies, giving each exclusive distribution rights in different regions of the country. In return, Eskimo Pie reasoned, it could demand that its licensees reach certain levels of production, or be replaced by competing firms. "It's a way for us to get a greater commitment from our licensees," Hord said.

Use care to prevent injury from aerobics

Studies have proven aerobic dancing is an excellent form of exercise. But care must be taken to prevent injury.

In 1983, Suzanne Milburn and Nancy Kay Butts of the University of Wisconsin-LaCrosse compared the training responses of college females to aerobic dance and jogging. They concluded both forms of exercise were equally effective for improving cardiorespiratory endurance when performed at similar intensities, frequencies and durations.

Other studies have examined the frequency of injury among aerobic dance instructors and participants. No correlation has been found between increased risk of injury and a participant's age, gender, height or weight.

But other factors — such as shoe type, floor surface, technique and amount of participation — are more important than individual physical characteristics.

Repeated bouncing on a hard surface while wearing the wrong footwear has been found to produce the most common "overuse injuries" to the knee, ankle and foot.

A study on aerobic dance injuries was done by San Diego physical education instructors Lorna Francis and Peter Francis. Their research concluded most injuries caused by aerobic dancing occur below the knee. The most common injury is to the shin, followed by the ankle, foot and arch. Less common injuries are to the back, hips, calf and Achilles' tendon.

The most common reasons for injuries are surface, footwear, poor body mechanics, inadequate strength, poor flexibility, insufficient or improper warmup, and progressing too rapidly into the exercise program.

The Francis report said a proper floor for aerobic dancing must provide adequate shock absorption without sacrificing stability to the feet and legs.

The lowest frequency of injury was found to occur on a concrete floor, heavily padded and covered with carpet. The highest injury frequency was found on a concrete floor covered with carpet, without padding.

They also said court or running shoes are not suitable for aerobic dancing. Proper footwear must provide adequate shock absorption and arch support.

Mary Jo Cooper, who teaches aerobic dancing at the Hollywood, Fla., YMCA, said several shoe companies manufacture footwear especially designed for aerobic dancing.

"I wear Avia shoes, which cost about $35 a pair," she said. "Whatever brand you buy, you should look for a lot of padding to absorb the shock of bouncing up and down, and lateral support for the ankles."

Cooper said the basic aerobic workout has changed in the last 10 years.

Scientists study El Nino's hurricane effects

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Scientists just last month saw increasing signs that the mysterious and powerful weather phenomenon, "El Nino," would return, perhaps resulting in fewer hurricanes this season.

Now they say that developments favoring El Nino have not occurred as expected, perhaps resulting in more hurricanes than anticipated.

El Nino, which means "the child" in Spanish, is the gradual warming of the Pacific Ocean around the equator and a subsequent shift in winds that cause unusual weather around the world and sometimes violent changes in the global climate. The name "El Nino" was coined by fishermen in Peru who noticed that an increase of unusually warm waters off their coast often occurred in late December, around Christmas.

One of the effects of the wind shift is that hurricanes, which form in the Atlantic and threaten the eastern seaboard, often are nipped in the bud. The hurricane season begins June 1 and runs through November.

Based on early warming of portions of the eastern Pacific Ocean, there was a feeling among scientists who are watching for the phenomenon that El Nino likely would develop this summer.

But subsequent changes have failed to materialize, and now scientists are not as certain. If these changes do not occur by June, El Nino likely will not form this year, they say.

"We just have to wait it out," said Eugene Rasmusson, an El Nino researcher at the Climate Analysis Center of the National Weather Service. "We can't really make a hard call on this until we get through May. It's going to have to begin pretty soon and very fast."

Last month, weather service meteorologists said there were signals that El Nino had begun to form, and they gave a better than 50 percent chance that it would develop.

"It certainly is not a clear situation. We're really not sure what will develop. We see a few signs that indicate, yes, an El Nino is beginning," Vernon Kousky, a weather service meteorologist said last month.

Based on the mild warming that already has occurred — the ocean surface temperature has warmed 3 or 4 degrees, to 2 degrees above normal from a degree or two below normal — scientists expected further changes in the western Pacific, such as increased rainfall around the international dateline and strong westerly winds.

"We haven't seen any of those yet," Rasmusson said. "This next month will be crucial. If by the end of May we haven't seen any of these developments, the prospects for development long-range is very dim."

El Nino can create violent storms off the coast of South America while causing droughts in Southeast Asia, Australia and Southern Africa.

Schools of fish in cold waters off Peru and Ecuador have died from deepening warm water, and birds that rely on them as a source of food have suffered.

The warming that has occurred so far this year was mostly west of South America, so "it didn't have much effect on Peru's or Ecuador's coast," Rasmusson said. "The effect was very brief in the Galapagos Islands in February and early March. Mostly it affected the ocean area, in that there was more than normal rainfall south of the equator."

The most intense El Nino recorded, in 1982 and 1983, was linked to typhoons in Tahiti, monsoons in India, droughts in the Amazon countries, Indonesia and Africa, high rainfall in California and the southeastern United States and killer rainstorms off South America.

Among its effects, scientists speculate, are See WEATHER/Page 34

Famed psychiatrist chides young people

O. Spurgeon English, who is almost 85 and who is in his 53rd year of practicing psychiatry, was talking about his perception of the state of marriage:

"Young people — and some not so young — desire too much and have too little to give. They are looking for fulfillment and know too little about how to fulfill. Instead of using a gentle way to patiently help the growth of their mate, they resort to the shortcut or lazy way of getting what they would like by nagging and criticizing. The human psyche in this latter part of the 20th century isn't strong enough or mature enough to take, much less use, the comments of the mate who believes that he or she is speaking for the good of the other."

"I have sometimes wished that I might be president of a small liberal arts college, where I could ensure that the college would give a course on how to be successfully and happily married. I would consider it the most valuable course in the curriculum."

English, who lives in Narberth, Pa., is one of the big names in the world of psychiatry. Psychoanalyzed in the early 1930s in Vienna and Berlin by the famed and controversial Wilhelm Reich, English was head of psychiatry at Temple University in Philadelphia for almost 30 years. He has written five books and enough professional articles to paper the walls of a very large house.

Over lunch, I asked English to share his views on marriage, because a good bit of his practice today involves counseling people whose marriages are rocky and people who are struggling with the question of whether it's even appropriate for them to get married.

Let's listen as he talks about what he sees:

"People don't marry as readily as they did when I was young. They're so aware of the difficulties of making a marriage work ... and they're so involved in doing their own thing ... They shy away from committing to somebody. This is especially true of men."

"You take a man who's 30, a good age for marriage, and he's too much in love with his own comforts, his own routines. He is self-centered and focuses on his own pleasures. He goes off to ski on weekends in the winter and he plays golf and tennis on weekends in the summer. ... The woman he dates during the week is left behind with nothing to do on weekends, and she's annoyed," but there is not much she can do about it because of the man's mindset that women are dispensable.

"A man is not impressed — as he used to be — that a woman loves him. It doesn't stir him emotionally." Today's man tends not to appreciate a woman's value and not to view a woman "as a necessity, the way men used to. ... He seems to assume that women will be available when he wants them and he postpones wanting them for a long time."

Women, English said, are wary, too, but not for the reasons that you might think. It's not that women are reluctant to give up the independence that permits them to pursue their careers full bore. Rather, it is that women don't trust men.

"Fifty years ago, a woman married a man she assumed to be steady and dependable — and usually he was." Translation: He didn't run around with other women. "But today's male is looked on as more flirtatious and seductive. That worries the woman. ... It's not uncommon for me to see a woman with adolescent children, and she's unsure of her husband and who he might leave her for. Women are afraid of losing their husbands to other women."

They're fearful for reasons of security — and public image."

What does a woman have to do to hold a man's affection?

"I think she needs a warm, even disposition. She needs not to be inclined to be critical or reproachful. ... I have great antipathy for contention. ... I don't care for contentious people. ...

"There's a tendency for women to want a lot and to demand a lot from the man. There's a lot of 'Why don't you?' and 'Why are you so inconsiderate?' Why do you work so late? Why aren't you more affectionate? There's a problem with the way women communicate. ... How much better it would be if they appealed to the man with 'I'd like it if you ... You would make me happy if ... Would you like to do something for me?'"

If English were president of that small liberal arts college, how would he design a course on successful marriage?

In a nutshell, he said, they need to learn what marriage is all about, the dynamics of marriage. It's something that they should find out from their parents, but they don't. Why not?

"Parents today have little or nothing to teach their children about marriage ... because they don't know much about what they do. They're busy and involved in it, but they have great difficulty explaining it."

Young widow can receive mother, child benefits

Copley News Service

Q: My daughter who got married last November already is a widow. Her husband was just killed in an auto accident.

She is expecting a child. Will she and the baby be entitled to any Social Security? — P.H.G.

A: In addition to being the legal widow, an individual must have been married to the deceased worker for not less than nine months. However, if the deceased worker dies accidentally within the nine-month period, the duration of marriage requirement is considered met.

After the birth of the child, your daughter should contact her local Social Security office to apply for mother's and child's benefits. She will need a marriage certificate, death certificate and the child's birth certificate.

Q: I understand that Social Security is starting to review disability cases. Are these reviews something new? — C.O.

A: No. Social Security has always reviewed cases in which a person has an impairment that is expected to improve. However the number of reviews was fairly small.

Several changes enacted into the law have improved the review process. All evidence is completely developed. Decisions are made based on uniform national rules.

Q: I would like to know where to write to get my Medicare card replaced. I recently lost it. Do I have to write to Baltimore, Md? — T.M.

A: You should contact your local Social Security office by telephone or mail to request replacement of your lost Medicare card.

Q: My wife and I arrived in this country as immigrants Feb. 24, 1979. On April 4, 1979, I found employment that lasted until I was laid off Dec. 31, 1982, due to my employer's budgetary problems. My wife, who also was employed, lost her job when the company closed last year.

We now are both age 63 and still out of work. I know we didn't work along enough to qualify for Social Security benefits but can't we get back what we contributed? We need the money to help with medical expenses. — H.C.R.

A: No refunds are made because the contributions of all are used to contribute to the security and welfare of those eligible for payments. This reflects a general principle in taxation that the tax applies to all, even though some individuals may not directly benefit, e.g., a school tax. Also, you may return to covered work and meet the work requirements through that additional work.

Corona Expressway EIS narrows down choices

By Don Green

The long-awaited environmental report on the Corona Expressway found that a freeway would displace more homes and businesses than an expressway, but would also provide better traffic flow and safety.

The draft environmental impact statement makes no final recommendation, but narrows a laundry list of alternatives down to three basic options: no project, an expressway or a freeway.

Three consulting firms prepared the EIS, which was reviewed and revised by the state Department of Transportation (Caltrans).

The environmental report was two years in the making, and the draft was completed six months later than originally scheduled, said Bob Austin, chief of the environmental branch for Caltrans' district office in San Bernardino.

Austin explained that the EIS is not intended to identify a preferred alternative. That recommendation will come after public hearings and will be the focus of the final EIS, which could be approved by the start of 1987, Austin said.

He noted that proposed improvements would have relatively little impact on property south of the Pomona Freeway. Most homes affected are in Pomona, particularly an area south of Mission Boulevard, Austin said. Plans will have an impact there whether the route is widened as an expressway or upgraded to a freeway, he added.

The EIS examines the 15.6-mile stretch of Route 71 from the Holt Avenue interchange in Pomona to the Riverside Freeway (Route 91) in Riverside County. Route 71 runs along the western border of Chino.

Austin said the "no-build" alternative provides a foundation for comparison to other options and usually remains an option through the draft EIS.

However, the EIS notes that no project would be inconsistent with plans of San Bernardino, Los Angeles and Riverside counties and the cities of Chino and Pomona.

"Failure to improve Route 71 to high expressway or freeway standards would result in a deterioration in traffic service along the route, including traffic conflicts, reduced speeds, delays and congestion, and increased accident rates," the report says.

Gene Baguley said the Route 71 Coalition favors a full freeway over a widened and improved expressway. The coalition is an advocacy group of business representatives and public officials from communities along the route. Baguley is the chairman of a coalition subcommittee reviewing the EIS.

Sticking with an expressway would be "building in obsolescence," Baguley said. He noted the potential for the relatively undeveloped Chino Hills to one day have 39,000 homes.

One option might be to phase in freeway improvements, he said. However, Baguley pointed out that construction is unlikely to begin before 1991 in any case.

The Corona Expressway is a six-lane freeway for a short span from the San Bernardino Freeway to Holt Avenue. It narrows to a four-lane expressway from Holt to Riverside Drive, just south of the Pomona Freeway. From there it is a two-lane highway to Carbon Canyon Road, three lanes to a location near the border of San Bernardino and Riverside counties and two lanes to its juncture with the Riverside Freeway.

A chart of the final alternatives shows the freeway at eight lanes from the San Bernardino Freeway to Mission Boulevard, six lanes until an interchange with Soquel Canyon Road and four lanes to the Riverside Freeway.

The expressway alternative would be eight lanes from the San Bernardino Freeway to Soquel Canyon, six lanes to Euclid Avenue and four lanes to the Riverside Freeway.

A freeway allows access and exit through interchanges only. The expressway would feature interchanges and a limited number of signal-controlled intersections. The EIS suggests grade-separated interchanges at Mission Boulevard, Rio Rancho Road, Chino Avenue and Soquel Canyon Road as part of an improved expressway.

Cost estimates are about $100 million for an expressway and $170 million for a freeway.

The EIS found that an expressway would displace 43 to 48 homes and two businesses. The freeway would displace 78 to 84 homes and 11 businesses.

Even with the construction of sound barriers, noise would exceed federal guidelines at 36 or 37 homes with an expressway and 117 homes with an at-grade freeway. Elevating the freeway at certain locations or depressing the route below grade would reduce the noise impact.

The EIS points out that the Corona Expressway defines a boundary between existing and new development for most of its route and does not pose a disruption to communities. However, the route bisects an older residential neighborhood between Mission Boulevard and North Ranch Road in Pomona.

No significant impacts to plants and animals were indicated in the report. The route can be designed to keep from cutting into the basin capacity of the flood plain around Prado Dam, the report says.

The team of consultants drafting the EIS were Parsons, Brinckerhoff, Quade and Douglas Inc., Gruen Associates and Phillips, Brandt and Reddick.

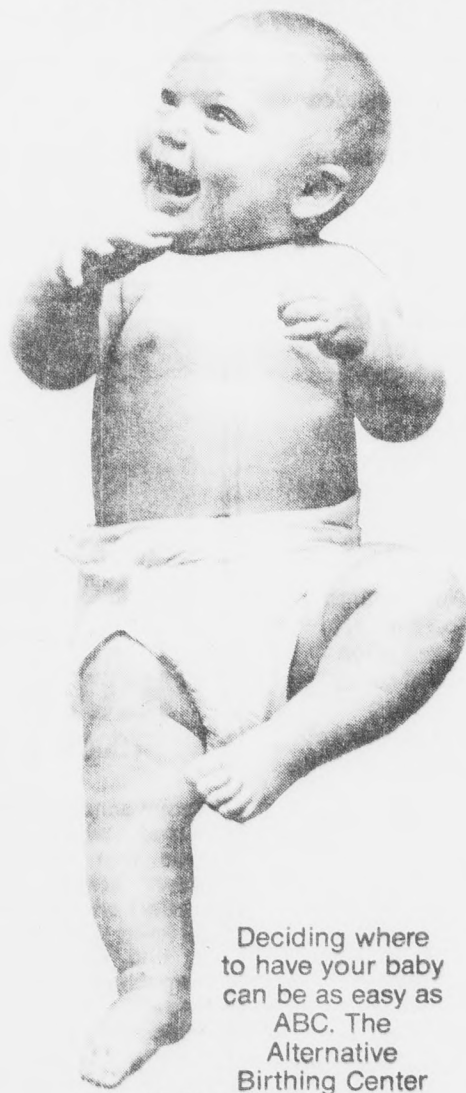

A public hearing on the EIS is scheduled for 7 p.m. June 24 in gymnasium of Don Antonio Lugo High School. Caltrans will show maps and answer questions at three workshops before that hearing.
